

D. Patrick O'Reilley

senior counsel with Finnegan, Henderson, Farabow, Garrett & Dunner in Washington

Patrick O'Reilley is senior counsel with Finnegan, Henderson, Farabow, Garrett & Dunner in Washington, DC, USA. For over 40 years, he has been assisting large and small companies with technology transactions, ranging from simple intellectual property license agreements to cross-border technology transfer agreements to complex research and marketing collaborations. He assists clients in all phases of such transactions, including formulating strategies for exploiting intellectual property and technology to achieve desired business goals, negotiating and drafting associated agreements, such as employment, consulting, joint R&D, license, marketing, distribution, supply, and collaboration agreements, and resolving disputes arising from technology transfer contracts.

He has taught technology transfer principles in law schools and in continuing education programs in the U.S. and worldwide. He is co-author of a widely-used text entitled Drafting Patent License Agreements, 8th Ed. (BNA 2015).

He is past president of the Licensing Executives Society International and past president of LES (USA & Canada). He has a JD degree from George Washington University Law School and a BS from the United States Naval Academy.